Service holds annual Army Emergency Relief campaign

By Sgt. 1st Class Connie Dickey
Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The Army Emergency Relief campaign began March 1 and runs through May 15, with each command setting specific dates within that window.

AER has been helping soldiers since World War II, and assistance to soldiers and family members is rising, according to the organization's deputy director for finances.

"Last year we dispersed $37 million to more than 59,000 soldiers and family members," Greg Mason said. He said the largest category for assistance is vehicle repairs, emergency travel and rent help.

The vast majority of soldiers asking for assistance are in the ranks of staff sergeant and below and lieutenants and captains, said Dennis J. Spiegel, AER corporate secretary. "Ninety percent of the cases fall within those lower ranks, however, we get some senior NCOs along with retired lieutenant colonels needing help."

Another area in which AER is finding requests for assistance rising is in emergency travel help. Spiegel explained that since January 1998 when the Red Cross stopped providing emergency financial aid, AER has seen about a 44 percent increase in emergency travel needs. "Soldiers can still go to a Red Cross center and apply for aid, and the Red Cross will give them money, however AER pays the Red Cross that money back," he said.

Soldiers asking for assistance must have a specific reason for the request and have documentation to verify the request, Spiegel said. Funds are given in the exact amount needed and many times, if the request is for vehicle repairs, rent or utilities, a check in the specific amount is made out to the vendor, landlord or company.

From the desk of the Garrison Commander

"I would like to bring up an important subject that hasn't been talked about lately but one that I believe all of us need to thoroughly know about. That subject is Human Immunodeficiency Virus and possible contact for us or our loved ones.

"The following article was printed last year but is still very appropriate today. Please read it and share it with your family and friends."

HIV, AIDS and casual contact

Human Immunodeficiency Virus, the virus that leads to Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, commonly known as AIDS, is not transmitted through everyday contact. HIV is a fragile virus, and no cases of transmission through casual contact have been reported in a childcare setting anywhere in the world.

HIV is not transmitted by touching, hugging or kissing, sharing food, dishes, drinking glasses or cutlery, being coughed, sneezed or cried on; sharing toys, even those that have been mouthed; diapers or toilet seats; urine stool, vomit, saliva, mucus, or sweat (untainted by blood).

HIV is transmitted from one person to another by semen, vaginal secretions, breast milk, blood, and body fluids containing blood, usually through unprotected sexual intercourse or the sharing of contaminated needles. It is also transmitted from mother to child during pregnancy or delivery or by breastfeeding.

Simple contact between blood and intact skin is not enough to transmit HIV. Three conditions are necessary for transmission: the blood must be fresh, there must be sufficient quantity and it must have a route of entry into the bloodstream of the unaffected person.

Biting often concerns parents, but there has never been a confirmed case of transmission by biting. To risk transmission, a child infected with HIV would have to have fresh blood in his mouth and break the skin of an unaffected child. An uninfected biter would have a theoretical risk of exposure only if he broke the skin of a child infected with HIV and drew blood into his mouth. Such events are very unlikely.

Parents also worry about accidents and fights, but fresh blood-to-blood contact among children is extremely unusual.

Children infected with HIV have the same right to attend childcare as other children. HIV is considered a disability, and law does not allow discrimination on the basis of disability. Staff also cannot be discriminated against, fired, or non-renewed because of their HIV status.

Childcare plays an important role in the lives of children infected with HIV, offering them peers, stimulation, stability, and the chance to learn new skills. A child's parents, physician and social worker will decide whether childcare is suitable and monitor the progress of the child.

The childcare staff probably will not know if a child is infected with HIV. Many children have no symptoms, and if no one in the family has been diagnosed as HIV positive, the family may never suspect that the child has the virus.

Col. Peter Dausen, U.S. Army, Garrison Commander

If the parents know, they have no obligation to tell the center. Because they may fear discrimination, they may keep the information to themselves. If they decide to tell an educator, that individual has an obligation to keep the information confidential. There is no need for the parents of the other children to know since a child with HIV poses no danger while engaging in the typical activities in a child care center.

It is important for childcare centers to develop a health policy that respects the rights of all children and staff to privacy and confidentiality. For everyone's protection, the policy should include the use of universal precautions and proper hygiene, procedures for informing parents about contagious diseases, and procedures for excluding sick children and children with serious behavior problems.

1999 CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION MONTH PROCLAMATION

Whereas, child abuse prevention is a community problem and finding solutions depends on involvement among people throughout the community;

Whereas, statistics of children who are abused and neglected escalate each year;

Whereas, the effects of child abuse are felt by whole communities, and need to be addressed by the entire community;

Lawn Care and Self-Help Center reviews policies

By Nolan Ferreira

Supply Division

The Presidio of Monterey Annex Lawn Care and Self-Help Center will now only provide light bulbs to family housing occupants on a "one-for-one" replacement basis. This means resident need to bring in the burned out or broken light bulb for an equal exchange.

The Self-Help program has experienced some apparent hoarding or "stock piling" by some residents. Residents are asking for large quantities of bulbs without providing proof that replacement is required.

This practice creates difficulty for the small Self-Help operation with the limited amount of available storage space and funds availability. The center staff frequently makes purchases to replenish the shelves with self-help supplies in support of about 1,590 family housing facilities. Last year more than $25,000 worth of self-help items were provided to family housing occupants.

The staff would like to ask residents of all communities to do their part in not abusing the privileges in place and to eliminate hoarding self-help supplies. This will ensure there are enough supplies for other family housing occupants.

Lawn care equipment

On another issue, community residents should return all overdue lawn care equipment as soon as possible to the Lawn Care and Self-Help Center. The loan policy requires residents return equipment within 24 hours of issue or the next workday.

In some cases residents are retaining lawn care equipment as much as four months. The staff has tried various methods to recover overdue equipment including telephone calls, delinquent notices, visits to quarters and delinquency lists sent to unit commanders. As a result some resident expressed feeling harassed or hassled.

The Lawn Care and Self-Help Center staff is not trying to harass their patrons. The center loans out lawn care equipment and gardening hand tools to any family housing occupants at "no cost." It can only continue to provide quality service if they have equipment available to loan.

For those individuals with delinquent accounts, the staff asks that you consider taking time to return all overdue lawn care equipment. This will give the center personnel an opportunity to perform preventative maintenance on equipment and enable the Lawn Care Center to have enough lawn care equipment readily available.

The Lawn Care Center personnel wishes to thank all patrons for using their equipment responsibly and safely and for following all established guidelines.

The Lawn Care and Self-Help Center is located in Building 4506 on the Presidio of Monterey Annex. It is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m., closed for lunch 1-2 p.m.; and Saturday, 7:30 a.m.-3 p.m., closed for lunch noon-12:30 p.m.

Fire at CDC

A fire was detected March 14 at the Monterey Road Child Development Center in the Staff Lounge closet.

The Presidio of Monterey Annex Fire Department extinguished the fire and damage was limited to the closet. No other rooms were affected by the fire, and the Child Development Center was open for business the next day.

The damage from the fire could have been costly if it were not for the quick action of the fire department, according to installation officials.

Army implements enlisted retention policy changes

By Gerry Gilmore

Army News Service

Promotion-eligible specialists will be allowed to complete 13 years of service, and sergeants eligible for promotion to staff sergeant will be able to retire at 20 years of service, according to Army enlisted retention policy changes.

The changes, which become effective Thursday, return the retention control points for promotion-eligible specialists and sergeants to pre-drawdown states, according to Sgt. Maj. Jerome Pionk, enlisted retention sergeant major, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. The RCP for promotion-eligible specialists was changed from eight years to the current 10 years of service in 1997, he said, and the RCP for promotion-eligible sergeants was changed from 20 years to the current 15 years of service in 1993.

Retention control points indicate mandatory separation from service or retirement dates for junior enlisted soldiers and noncommissioned officers who don't meet the Army's "up or out," promotion rules, Pionk said.

Under the new policy, the retention control points for specialists and sergeants who haven't appeared before promotion boards (non-promotable) remain the same at 10 years and 15 years, respectively, he said.

With the drawdown complete, Pionk said, the Army no longer needs to pare large numbers of promotion-eligible enlisted soldiers as it did during the early '90s. Additionally, the current lean recruiting environment is making each soldier already on active duty that much more valuable in the eyes of Army personnel planners.

"[Changing the retention control points] is the right thing to do, from a mid-career point of view, because we are now experiencing some shortages of specialists, sergeants and staff sergeants," Pionk said. "[Prior to the drawdown] 13 years was the point we found that if soldiers hadn't made sergeant, then they'd probably lost all avenues of getting promoted. [Promotion-eligible specialists] who are held up from making sergeant aren't necessarily 'bad' soldiers. Many are good soldiers who've been either held up [for promotion] for being in an over-strength military occupational specialty for quite awhile.

"[Concerning] sergeant promotables going to 20 years, that was also an old policy in effect prior to the drawdown ... Again, these are pretty good soldiers; we anticipate most of them will make staff sergeant." Pionk noted the Army had to make some hard personnel decisions during the 1991-97 drawdown.

"It was purely a manpower question; the Army was coming down from 770,000 soldiers to around 480,000," he said. "The Army is now at the steady-state at which it needs to be. Now we need an even flow of specialists, sergeants, staff sergeants, sergeants first class, master sergeants and sergeants major.

"The only way we can do that is to allow soldiers to stay longer ... to enable them to get promoted to their maximum efficiency," Pionk said.

Army efforts to keep good soldiers in uniform haven't been limited to junior enlisted soldiers or junior NCOs, Pionk said. On Jan. 1, the Army raised the retention control points for master sergeants and first sergeants from 24 to 26 years.

Federal employees forced to 'eat' official travel costs

Officials say some are still unaware of April 1998 DOD policy change

By Staff Sgt. Amy Hickey
AMC News Service Editor

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. — Since the Defense Department amended its policy on official travel nearly a year ago, its Office of Hearing and Appeals has received and denied hundreds of appeals from federal employees who inappropriately purchased tickets for official travel.

At Scott Air Force Base alone, more than 20 military and civil service employees have had to cough up nearly $4,000 because they failed to coordinate their travel plans through a government-approved travel office — a violation of DOD policy.

"They've really tightened the screws to ensure people follow the rules," said Chief Master Sgt. Phillip Brown, chief of Air Mobility Command's traffic management branch.

The "rules," which are actually Defense Department directives, specify that when arranging travel, all government employees — military or civilian — must use a commercial ticket office contracted by the government; an in-house travel office such as a base traffic management office; or a General Services Administration travel management center.

Though the rules have been in place since January 1995, they were rarely enforced, said Master Sgt. Milton Lawrence, chief of customer service for the finance office here.

That changed in April 1998, when the Defense Department amended the policy to stipulate that travelers who arranged transportation through a non-authorized ticketing agency were not authorized reimbursement, he said.

"The only exception is if unusual circumstances exist, such as the non-availability of a government-approved ticketing agency," said Lawrence. "Non-availability doesn't mean the base travel office is closed for the day. It means that there isn't a government-approved travel office located in the general area."

The chances of there not being an approved agency to assist a member are slim to none, said Brown, because most contracted travel offices have toll-free numbers people can call any time of day to purchase tickets. They can even request to pick up their tickets at the airport if they're not near the ticketing office.

And if the office doesn't have a 24-hour, toll-free number, Brown said people can simply contact their installation's on-call traffic management representative via the base dispatcher and he or she can arrange ticketing.

Lawrence said many people have had a hard time adjusting to the policy because in their words, "it just isn't common sense," but he they should keep in mind that contracted fares offer them protection.

For instance, if travelers need to change their tickets, there are no fees involved and they are protected from any processing fee.

To make sure people don't wind up paying the transportation costs for official travel, Lawrence said they should always contact their local traffic management office or commercial ticket office before purchasing airline tickets. "That's the only foolproof way to ensure your money doesn't become the government's."

Individuals at Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center and Presidio of Monterey should call Carlson Wagonlit Travel for government-approved ticketing for official travel. Carlson Wagonlit office can be reached at 648-8609 or toll-free at (800) 381-1673. In emergencies and after duty hours, individuals can call the Carlson Wagonlit Travel 24-hour line (non-local) toll-free at (800) 468-2987. (Submitted for publication by the Presidio of Monterey Transportation Office)

"We want to solve problems," Spiegel said, "and to alleviate problems it is sometimes best to make the check out to someone else."

Although most of the funds given out are interest free loans, if a situation warrants the money may be given as a grant with no repayment needed.

"Assistance is evaluated on a case by case basis," Spiegel said. When assistance is a loan, the soldier decides how to repay AER, and the repayment is taken out of a soldier's check through the Defense Finance and Accounting Service.

Another aspect of AER's help is with widows and orphans. "We took over the Army Relief Society in 1976, after the society approached AER for help. The relief society specifically helped widows, widowers and orphans with a monthly stipend," Spiegel said. In 1976 the society was caring for about 130 widows.

"Today we assist 30 widows with monthly income, and we re-evaluate each case every six months," he said. "The majority of the assistance we provide to widows/widowers is just after the death of the spouse because it takes several months for life insurance, SBP (Survivors Benefit Plan) and Social Security to take affect.

Children of soldiers — active, retired and deceased — may apply for educational assistance too, Spiegel said. Scholarships are awarded based on need and must be renewed yearly. Most of the amounts of the scholarships are between $600 and $1,700.

Mason said that in order for the organization to keep its not-for-profit status, it must raise one third of its income through public donations. It does this through the annual AER campaign.

Soldiers contributed almost $6 million to last year's annual campaign.

GMAT TEST Status

According to DANTES, there will not be any more paper and pencil GRE or GMAT administrations at DANTES test centers after Oct. 1. The last GRE given at the Presidio of Monterey Education Center will be by paper and pencil on April 12. All future GMAT testing will be at Sylvan Centers. They will be working with a voucher system for reimbursement after testing at Sylvan Centers. This system will require the military examinee to pay before testing, but DANTES will reimburse the test fee after testing. This will not become effective until after the new fiscal year. Any testing that is done at a Sylvan Center before Oct. 1, will be strictly at the examinee's expense.
